2. Problem

Put your problem statement here.
Make it short and crisp.

92%

of all humans have this problem

53%

are actively looking for a solution

89%

feel existing solutions don't meet their needs

3. Value proposition

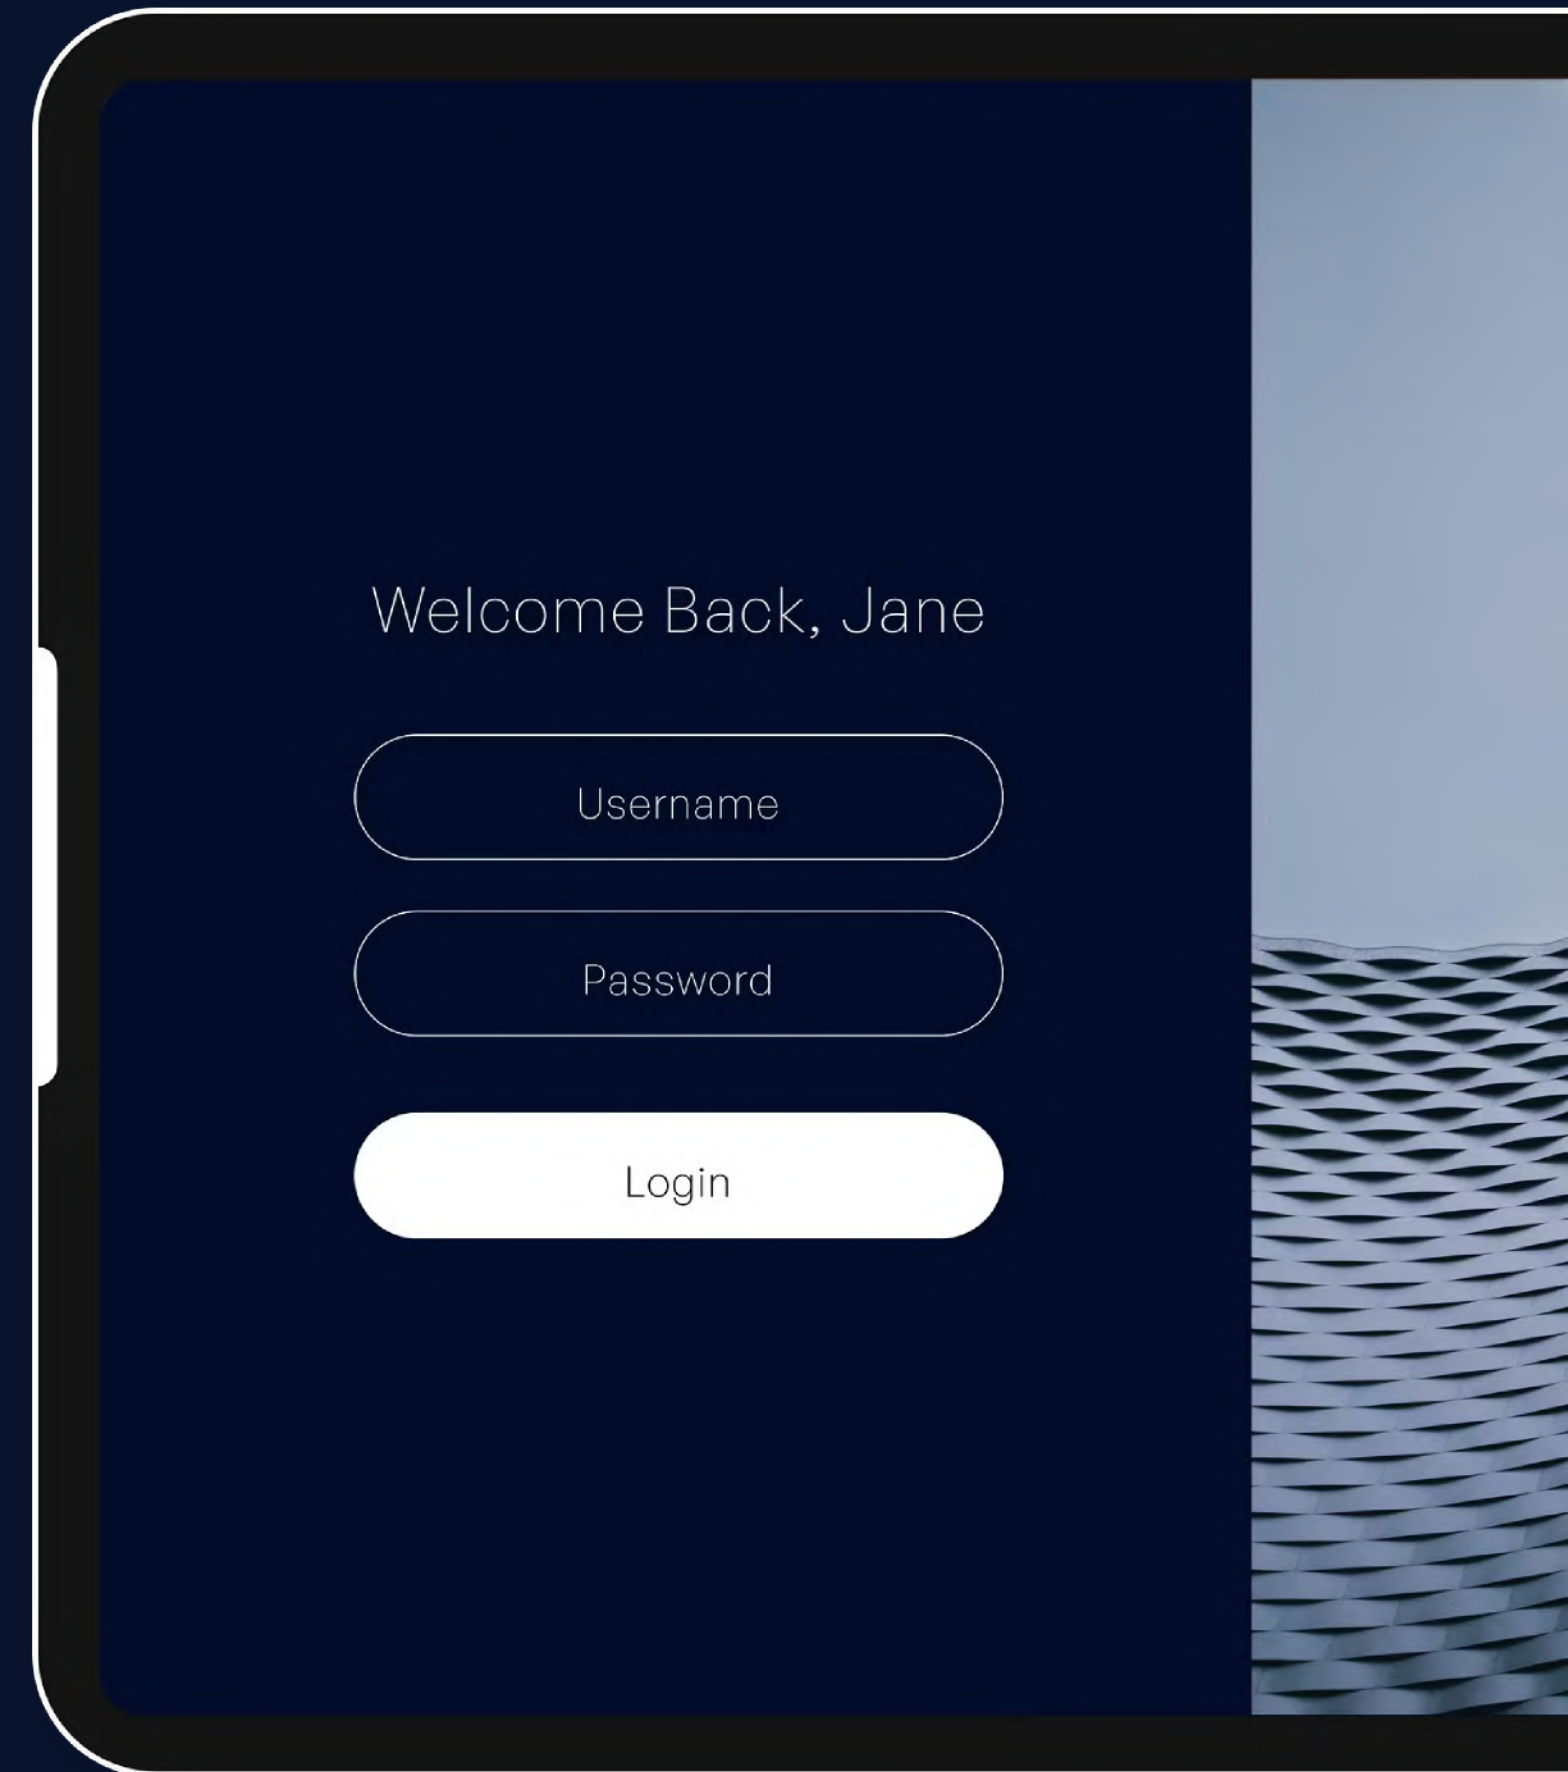

Describe how you will solve the problem in one sentence. (Okay, you can make it two if you absolutely have to.)

4. Underlying magic

You've explained what you're building, but what makes it special? Tell your audience about your secret sauce, your biggest differentiators, or — as Guy Kawasaki puts it — your underlying magic.

- Differentiator 1
- Differentiator 2
- Differentiator 3

5. Business model

How are you going to make money and what are your unit costs? Describe your high-level business model here and talk about the customer segments you'll be targeting. How willing are your customers to pay, and what pricing tiers will you offer?

6. Go-to-market plan

Ideal customer

Describe your target customers here. Who are they, where do they live, what are their pain points and jobs to be done?

Acquisition

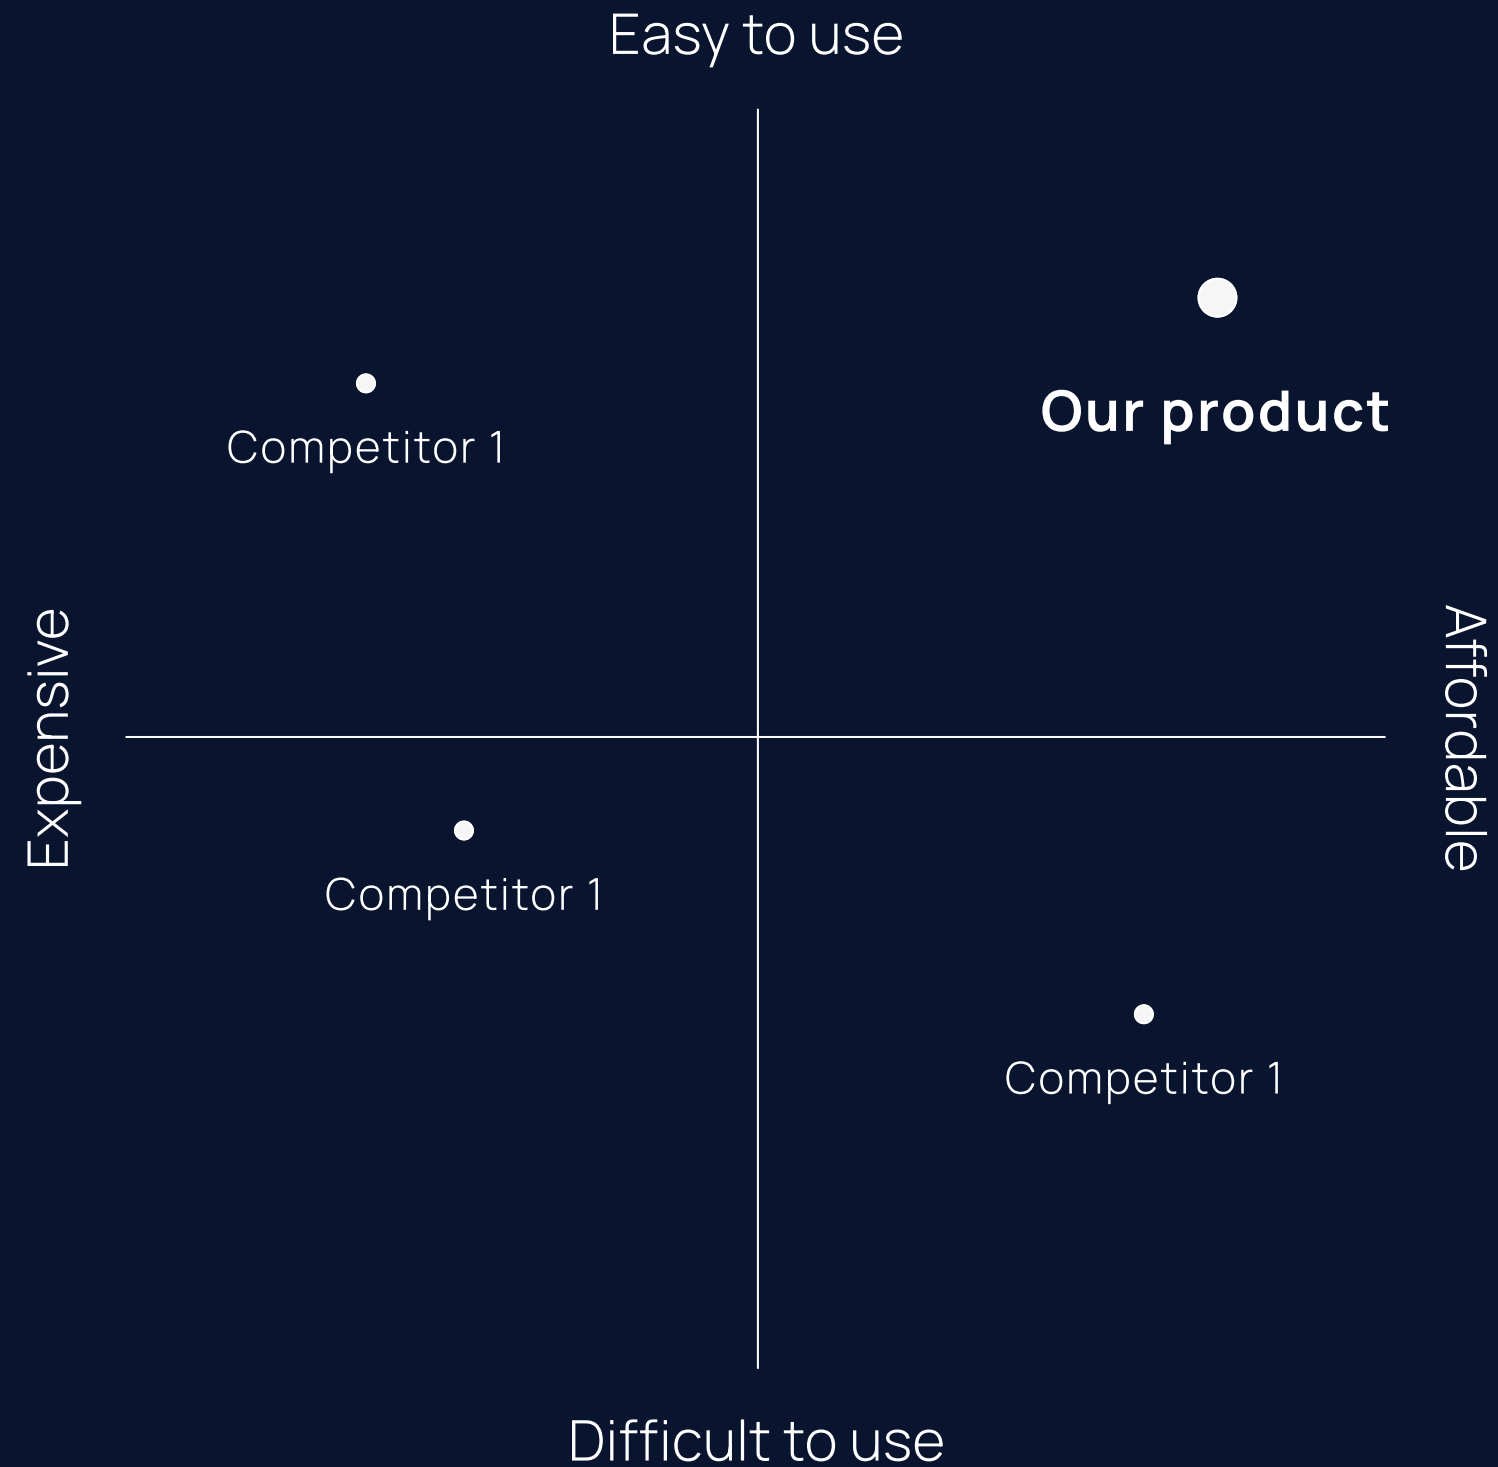

Explain how you are going to acquire users. What channels will you focus on at every stage? What is the CAC for each channel?

Scale

How will you scale the product? Talk about your plans to expand to new markets, enter new market segments by introducing enterprise features, or reach more customers any other way.

7. Competitor analysis

Competitive advantages

Show investors that you know the competitive landscape well and explain how (and why) you'll be able to become a market leader.

1. What makes you unique?
2. How will you be able to outperform your competitors?
3. What makes you confident these differentiators matter for consumers?

8. Management team

A lot of the time, VCs don't invest in products — they invest in teams. Convince your audience your team is capable of tackling the challenge, and explain what makes each team member a perfect fit for the job.
